AccountMate Certified as “Green” Company by the Bay Area Economic Development Board

PETALUMA, CA (June 23, 2008)— AccountMate Software Corporation’s President and CEO, David Dierke, accepted a Certificate of Compliance for the company’s commitment to ‘green’ initiatives at their workplace. It was presented by the Sonoma County Economic Development Board who had physically inspected AccountMate’s local Petaluma offices, its premises, processes and overall environmental impact before making the award presentation.

This San Francisco Bay Area Green Business Program Certificate acknowledges that AccountMate has taken steps beyond compliance toward conserving resources and protecting the environment. David Dierke stated, “I’m very proud of our company’s accomplishment in earning this recognition and feel good knowing AccountMate is doing its part in making the world a better place for future generations.”

He and his two partners feel strongly that AccountMate has a responsibility as an employer and a manufacturer to do their part regarding sustainability issues as there is an impact on a local level which rolls up to a global scale. Mr. Dierke says that he is “proud to share the fact that our new company headquarters was designed with ‘green’ in mind from the ground up. It incorporates many of the latest products and design concepts that reduce our overall energy consumption while promoting a healthier overall work environment for our employees.”

Green Business Program standards must be met in four areas before a company can be certified. These areas are: Water Conservation, Energy Conservation, Solid Waste Reduction & Recycling and Pollution Prevention.
